We feature: Sid Calderbank and Members of the Lancashire Society in dialect song and verse, ever popular.

The Lancashire Society devotes much time to keeping Lancashire traditions alive, by performing traditional mill songs and poetry often written at the loom. Those who have never experienced the bones being played or heard any of Sid Calderbank's stories have never lived! Performing during the afternoon as part of the "Tackler's Tales" duo but on the right doing a solo.

Morgan Owners Club visit in the afternoon,
a colourful presence.....

Members and Friends:

We are trying to organise a photo library/archive with pictures of former employees of James Nutter and Son at the mill, no matter when they were here. We now have some quite extensive employee records and your photographs would help to preserve the memory of these people over a broad spectrum of the present generation. If you are willing to add to our collection we would be very grateful indeed. You could just Email them to me, harrym@talktalk.net and I will personally see to it that they are included. Maybe you have friends who worked here; any help that you can give us would be sincerely appreciated. In any event, maiden and married names would help and, perhaps a rough idea of when they worked at the mill. Our archives give a good idea of the ages or birth years of some ex-employees, and in some cases where they lived at that time. Please help if you can, prints that you loan to us WILL be returned!

Members:

New membership cards are being issued so please bring your old one (if you can find it!) and we'll swap it for a new one of a somewhat more convenient size. Ask Jon on reception.

Ongoing work.

The recent gales have dislodged and broken the odd slate or two; the indefatigable David N. has scaled the roof and made very effective repairs. He always seems happiest working at heights.

UK HERITAGE HUB

The latest issue (20) of this online magazine is now available. Bancroft has, again, a page amidst some wonderful steam images. Our museum offering is on page 20 and the editor has included yet another personal entry of your scribe's on p10. Our Steaming Schedule is on page 30 but has already been overtaken by events. Issue 21 will have the updated version.
